"How do I get started?"

High School Preparation

It is never too early to start planning your career in veterinary medicine.

Academics

Taking biology, chemistry, and physics courses while maintaining a competitive GPA in high school will help prepare you for science prerequisites in college.

Track All Activities*

Begin logging all animal & veterinary experience, extracurricular activities, volunteer work, and employment. Shadow a vet, volunteer at a humane society, or join your local 4-H or FFA.

Early Admission Program (EAP)

Students pursuing careers in health science often make their career decision prior to undergraduate enrollment. The goal of the Early Admission Program is to aid students with a strong academic ability that are interested in veterinary medicine and guide them in their pursuit of a veterinary medical career.

Completion of the Program

Maintain an active status and complete the program requirements to guarantee a seat into the OSU College of Veterinary Medicine DVM Program.

Undergraduate Preparation

Choose a Major

Most students may choose animal science, biology, or zoology majors but your major is not a factor in admissions.

Complete Prerequisites

Each veterinary school requires specific courses to be completed before applying. It is important to view each schools' course requirements as they are not all the same.

Complete Test Requirements

Many schools require standardized tests. Deadlines & tests will vary. Check each schools' website.

Letters of Recommendation

It is never too early to start thinking about who you will request to write your letter of recommendation. Start building these relationships now.

Experiences

Veterinary schools are seeking applicants who have varied animal experiences. Volunteer at a humane society, gain employment at a vet clinic, or engage in research.
